Emmett McGroarty

Emmett McGroarty is director of the education initiative at the American Principles Project. He leads its effort to defend parental rights and to ensure that they have a say in what their children learn and who teaches it to them. He is also one of four founders of truthinamericaneducation.com, a nationwide information-sharing network of individuals and organizations that sheds light on the Common Core system. He is co-author of the primers, Controlling Education from the Top: Why Common Core Is Bad for America and of Cogs in the Machine: Big Data, Common Core, and National Testing, both of which were published by Pioneer Institute. His other written works have been published by, among others, Crisis Magazine, Daily Caller, New York Post, Public Discourse, The Blaze, The Examiner, Townhall Magazine, U.S. News & World Report, and USA Today. He has been a guest on, among others, the Glenn Beck Program, the Daily Run Down with Chuck Todd, Fox News, Laura Ingraham, Lars Larson, The Hugh Hewitt Show, and The Steve Deace Show. Mr. McGroarty is a graduate of Georgetown University and Fordham School of Law.